Sense Smarter Brain Booster - But we are using the much less common colonoscopy example. Instead, let's return to preventive care with a primary care doctor. Should a patient have the right to check a box and say "I want this visit to cover routine preventive care and nothing more"? Certainly. There is way too much discretion afforded physicians to code up whatever they want on claim forms such that two physicians seeing the exact same patient might code up different procedures and diagnostics for the exact same preventive health screening visit.
