How to Treat Low Testosterone Levels?

Low testosterone in the 40s is understandable but low testosterone in the 20s is a big deal for men. Whether we like it or not, testosterone deficiency is becoming the common condition amongst men who are over 40's and this has been addressed by Harvard University Research Center and many other institutions working on its causes.

First, testosterone is the name of an androgenic hormone that is produced by the testicles. The hormone is accountable for various masculine characteristics in men which include high-density muscle mass, facial hair, deeper voice, and physical power that separate them from females.

Testosterone in fact is also responsible for a wide array of biological functions such as improving bone density, producing Red Blood Cells, and keeping the mood enhanced for better living.

Testosterone is found in high levels in those men who are 20-30 years old but after a certain age (usually 40) testosterone begins to decline by 1-2% every year. This leads to the symptoms of testosterone deficiency that are:

- Impotency
- Loss of muscle mass
- Anxiety
- Panic disorder
- Less energy level
- Weight gain
- Anemia
- Hot flashes

Causes of low testosterone levels in men range from infectious diseases, obesity, stress to medications that are used to treat prostate hyperplasia or use of corticosteroid drugs. To cover up the mess, millions of men are using testosterone boosters that are generally a part of testosterone replacement therapy medications. The work of these drugs is to progress testosterone availability in the blood rather than activating the halted production of T-hormone. Natural testosterone boosters because of are used in a large number to cover up the symptoms of testosterone deficiency without side effects that are available with TRT.

Look closely as to how all the Titan XL Male Enhancement Ingredients take part in stimulating natural testosterone production. On the official site, you could see dozens of references available on each ingredient of the Titan XL Male Enhancement.

The ingredients in Titan XL Male Enhancement are:

D-Aspartic Acid

There is a strong relation between D-Aspartic Acid and testosterone levels which is only explained by many pages dealing with clinical studies. DAA indeed has a tendency to evoke testosterone production in men over 40, this is done by triggering a pituitary response which sends direct signals to the testicular functions and hence progress testosterone hormone production.

Titan XL Male Enhancement contains 3,000mg D-Aspartic Acid in every serving.

Asian Ginseng

Celebrated by many names (Panax Ginseng, Asian Red Ginseng) the herb contains a natural remedy for low testosterone levels in men. Studies suggest that Asian Ginseng is responsible for triggering luteinizing hormone especially if given in combination with D-Aspartic Acid. Asian Ginseng is different from American Ginseng because it contains the purest form of Ginsenosides.

Titan XL Titan XL Male Enhancement per serving contains 300mg of Asian Ginseng.

Ashwagandha Extract

Is Ashwagandha good for males? That depends on how much quantity you take of it. Ashwagandha is notably beneficial for male sexual performance which is mainly triggered due to testosterone secretion in old-aged men. Studies have shown using Ashwagandha supplements affects leanness of muscle mass and it improves mental clarity because of which infertility and other sex-related symptoms of testosterone deficiency can be overcome.

Titan XL Male Enhancement Evolve provides 300mg Ashwagandha Extract in each serving.

Indole-3-Carbinol

Too many studies are available about the effects of Indole-3-carbinol on serum testosterone levels. This ingredient in the Titan XL Male Enhancement supplement is added so Sex Hormone Binding Globulin can be inhibited. This prevents the conversion of testosterone into estrogen which is the last thing men need in the midst of hormonal imbalance. The purpose of Indole-3-Carbinol is to stop free testosterone entrapment by Estrogen which can also be beneficial in controlling prostate cancer causes.

Users will get 200mg of Indole-3-Carbinol in every serving of the Titan XL Male Enhancement.

Vitamin D3

The effect of Vitamin D on testosterone levels has been studied widely; Vitamin D3 is an essential vitamin that people get directly from sunlight. For many reasons, most males are not exposed to the sunlight and hence they don't get the proper amount of this Vitamin. When Vitamin D3 is deficient in males, reduced testosterone levels are observed.

There is a perfect dose of Vitamin D3 in the Titan XL Male Enhancement formula (5,000IU) which improves the T-levels by up to 20% in a single attempt.

Vitamin K2

Vitamin K2 dosage for testosterone is 150mcg in Titan XL Male Enhancement supplement which was studied extensively before being added. Vitamin K2 is effective for reducing calcium build-up in the arteries which reduces the burdens from them. Vitamin K2 is directly involved with increasing testosterone levels.

Magnesium

Titan XL Male Enhancement contains the best form of magnesium for erectile dysfunction and getting back your masculinity. There are hundreds of body functions that are carried out with the help of magnesium ion which involves muscle building, immunity building, and consistent hormone levels in the body.

Zinc

Zinc is always been the best protector of testosterone hormone that also reinvigorates youthfulness in men and women. Around 17% of the world's population is zinc deficiency which is why they have many health-related issues. Zinc deficiency's first symptom is testosterone deficiency which can affect the functions of gonads in men.

The test provides 30mg of Zinc in each serving.
