Moreover, what is the differentiating factor between the normal metabolism process and ketosis metabolism process? Let us find that out. In the normal metabolic stage, glucose gets acquired by breaking down carbohydrates. Glucose is the primary fuel that runs the body. But a rise in glucose levels increases blood sugar-level that leads to toxic levels of insulin in the body that leads to diabetics. But, in the ketosis stage, fats are broken down instead of carbohydrates. So, in place of glucose, ketones switch the position to give strength and energy to the cells for optimal functioning. It usually takes three to four days to reach the ketosis stage when you follow a customized diet.
